

LMC Asks All Students To Return

48 New Instructors
Put Faculty Near
'Full Scale'

BY JERRY KRIEGER
County-Farm Editor

Lake Michigan college will return to nearly full scale operation of classes Monday, President James Lehman said late Friday.

Instructors will be on hand for 90 to 95 per cent of all day classes, he said, and he issued a call to all students to return. Forty-eight new teachers have been hired and will join the 12 instructors who did not go out on strike and four teachers who returned after having been fired, according to Richard Creal, vice president for instruction. Creal added that he expected several more new instructors may be hired over the weekend.

President Lehman said that except for the nursing program classes, all of the 425 classes offered this semester but 42 will have instructors on hand Monday. He added that the number of classes not covered may be as low as 25 by Monday.

INSTRUCTORS QUALIFIED

President Lehman and Creal said the new instructors are all qualified to teach in the subject areas in which they are assigned. They added the semester can be completed and that all students will receive credits for all the courses they finish satisfactorily. The credits will be transferrable to other institutions, they assured.

Lehman said rebuilding the faculty was the main order of business since March 6, when 54 of the 66 full-time teachers were fired for not reporting back to their classrooms on orders from the board of trustees. The faculty walked out on strike on Feb. 15, for lack of agreement on contract terms. The principal point of disagreement was a demand for a 5.5 per cent pay raise.

The president noted that four of the 54 teachers who defied the board's return by March 5 or be fired order have been rehired. He said these four are on probationary status but will be paid at their old levels.

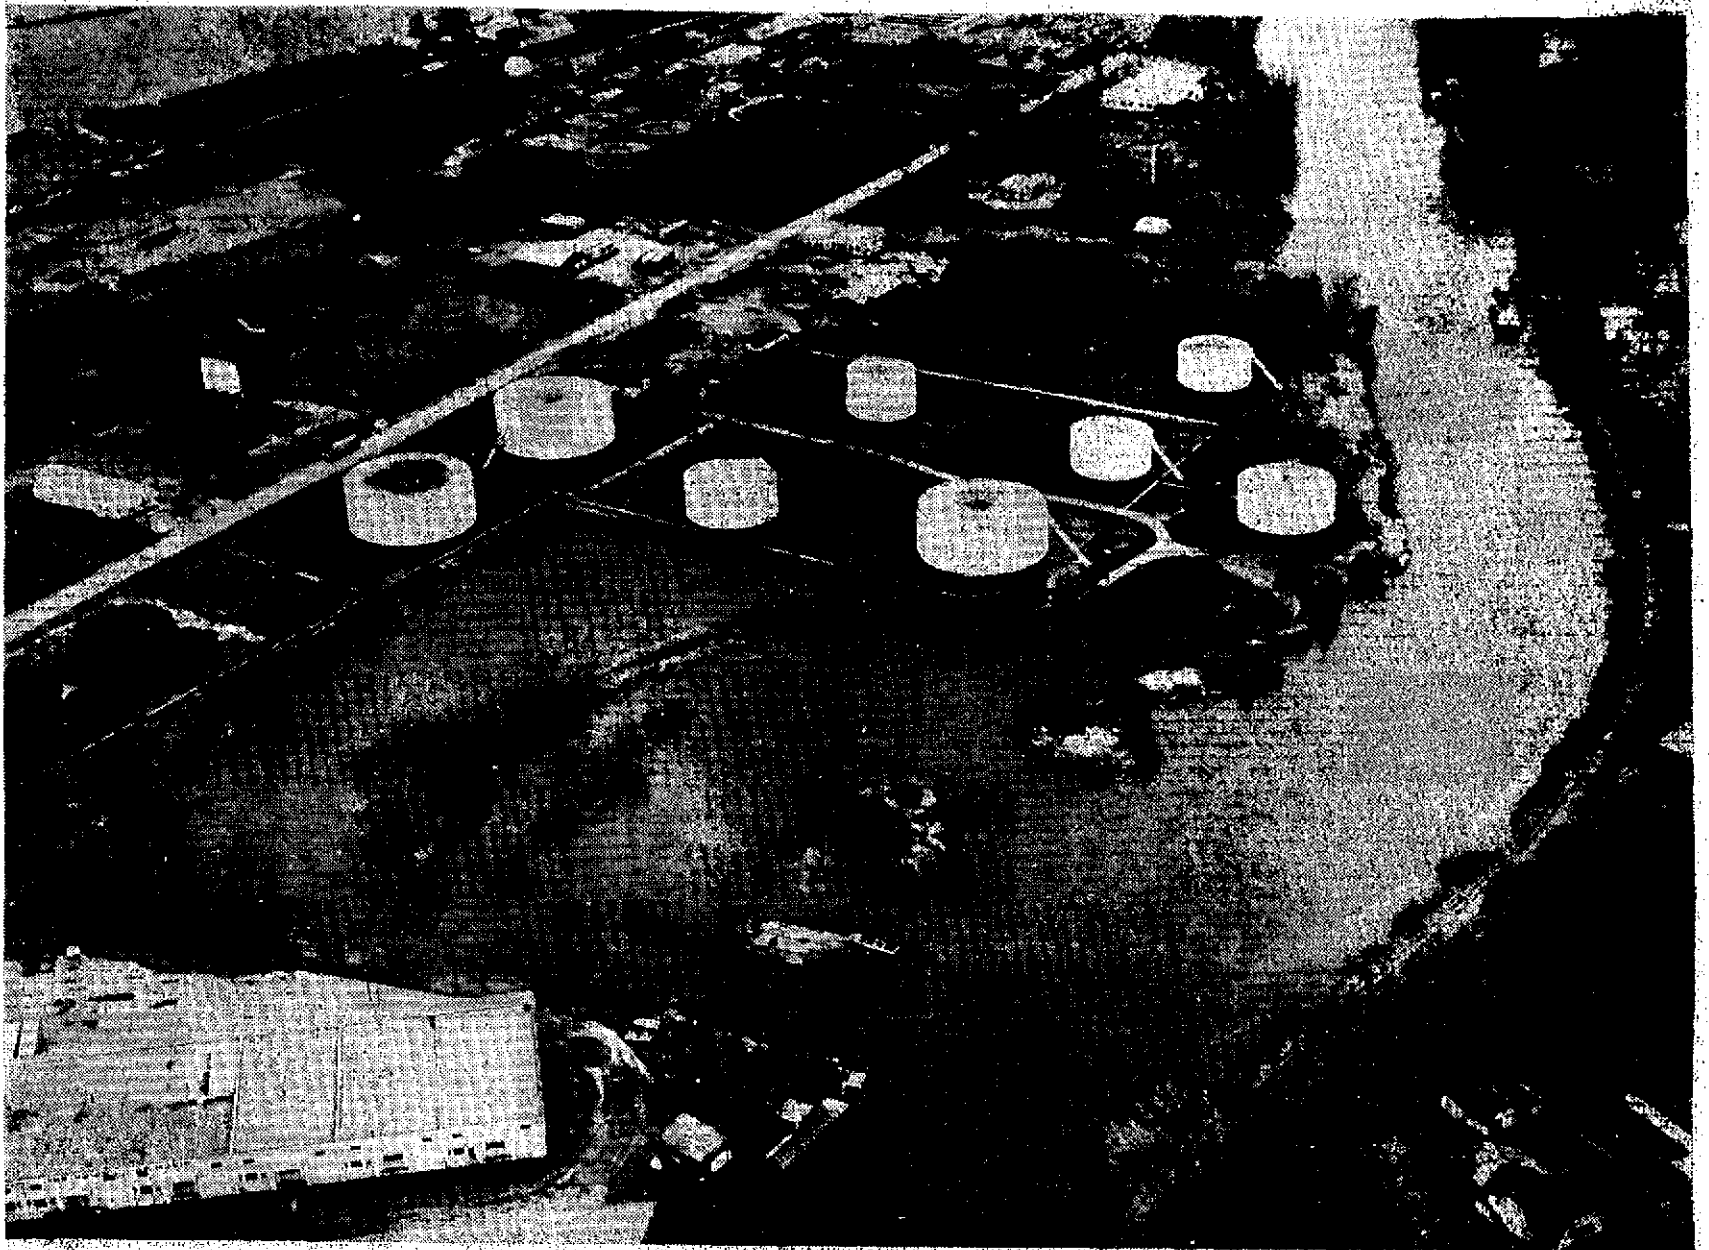

STUDENTS RETURNING

The college administrators reported a steady rise in the number of students who returned to classes this week as new instructors took their places in the classrooms. Class attendance counts reported for the week were: Monday 254; Tuesday 181; Wednesday 483; Thursday 228; Friday, incomplete but near 600.

Students who have questions about whether their various classes will be in session should call the regular college phone number and the information will be given them.

Except for the nursing classes, the subject areas that were still wanting for teachers were the biological sciences,

Eight Inches Of Snow Falls In Cass

Winter Returns In Full Force

Winter returned today to sock southwestern Michigan with up to eight inches of heavy, wet snow that clogged many roads.

Ross field at Benton Harbor reported this morning that virtually all airports along the western Michigan shoreline were shutdown this morning. The airport also said it recorded wind gusts of up to 60 miles an hour.

Indiana & Michigan Electric Co. said there were scattered power outages in the Twin City area. The power failures were caused by heavy winds and blown line fuses.

'State highway and county offices reported severe drifting, despite the wetness of the snow. Highway visibility was poor.

The Cass county sheriff's department reported eight inches of snow with many secondary roads closed and some vehicles stalled after slipping off roads.

The Berrien county road commission reported at midmorning that its crews were battling 3 to 5 inches of snow that was drifting onto roads. Similar conditions were reported in Allegan and Van Buren counties.

The State highway department said I-94 was open but becoming slippery because of a buildup of slush.

The storm struck Friday night when rain turned to snow. The middle of the week was marked by unseasonably warm temperatures that started buds popping.

Overnight low temperature on this newspaper's recording thermometer was 23. The weather bureau said it would be cloudy and windy tonight with occasional snow flurries and low temperatures in the upper teens to upper 20s.

Warmer weather was predicted for Sunday with highs in the lower 30s to near 40.

'Garbage' Dam Breaks; One Hurt

BERWIND, W.Va. (AP) — Water roared down a narrow southern West Virginia valley Friday night, toppling two houses and reportedly injuring one woman, authorities said.

There were conflicting reports on the source of the water.

McDowell County Sheriff's deputies and area residents said the water came from a makeshift strip mining dam that burst following a heavy rainstorm. But state police said the water came from behind a community garbage dump.

"There is no dam up there whatsoever," a state police trooper said. "There has been some strip mining in that area."

Heavy rains formed an impoundment behind the trash pile, the trooper said, and the water broke over the top of the dump and smashed into the two houses in Newtown Bottom below, flipping them onto their sides and damaging "six to eight" other homes.

Queens' Night

Local blossom queens will be selected tonight in Coloma, Eau Claire, Lawrence and New Troy.

Contests in all communities are scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Sites of the contests are: Coloma, Coloma high school; Eau Claire, Eau Claire high school; Lawrence, Lawrence high school; and New Troy, River Valley high school.

Queens selected will represent their communities in the Miss Blossomtime pageant, April 16, at Benton Harbor high school gymnasium.

Uisgebeath Flowing

By DEBBIE DUNDEI
Staff Writer

Uisgebeath will flow freely today! Now widely known as Irish Whisky, the concoction was supposedly created by St. Patrick, patron saint of Ireland. St. Patrick was not an Irishman but a Roman citizen, being born in either Wales or England, which were both Roman colonies in the year 387 A.D. He lived to be either 68, 72, or 104 years of age and St. Patrick's Day is celebrated on the day he died, March 17. Legend has it that he founded more than 300 churches, baptized 120,000 people, rid Ireland of snakes, planted the first shamrocks, wrote the first Irish laws and introduced the Roman alphabet into Ireland. As a St. Patrick's Day greeting card says, "Drinking Irish whisky in an Irish bar may not be the best way to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, but it sure beats crawling around in the grass looking for shamrocks."

The Dollar May Float Through After All

The badly shaken international currency markets reopen Monday morning to operate for the first time in 25 years outside the confines of pegged exchange rates.

The agreement put together in 1944 at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, by FDR and ratified by all of the Allies except Russia becomes another document of historical interest. Even if the nation's returned to officially decreed exchange rates the Bretton Woods concept would be missing.

Official exchange rates are as old as money itself for the reason that governments throughout the ages have found it convenient to the point of irresistibility to tinker with the currency. Painting the tone of reality to something which is not real at all is one of several characteristics setting mankind apart from the rest of the animal world.

Roosevelt's action at Bretton Woods rested on the argument it would be Pyrrhic indeed for the Allies to win a military victory only to founder on the economic chaos which World War II already had created. His premise called for the United States to take the lead in that reconstruction.

The currency agreement established the American dollar as the base measurement for all other currencies. It committed the U.S. to redeeming paper dollars in gold upon demand from abroad and obligated the other powers to settling a value on their currencies that would be fixed in dollar terms.

A recall of an Elisha or an Isaiah would have been needed at the time to foresee the European recovery and the rise of Japan from Hiroshima's ashes.

Bretton Woods presumed the outside world would be beating its way to the American doorstep into an indefinite future. It also assumed domestic inflation would never beset the United States such as had been the case in many Free World countries prior to World War II.

Free spending at home and a tremendous productivity abroad have nullified Bretton Woods.

Nixon is correct in saying a few weeks ago that the dollar still looks like a good, long term bet to him, but two devaluations of it within 18 months and Monday's opening trading between the major currencies are obvious signs it needs reconditioning.

An immediate effect of the currency float should end the loaded dice game being run by currency speculators against the dollar. Under the pegged exchange plan, they could trade dollars for West German marks, for example, on a reasonable expectation of the Bonn government re-valuing its money upward. If this did not come about, they could return to dollars at no loss.

The new rule makes it possible for the dollar to go up or down. Since the dollar has not been dethroned completely from its Bretton Woods status, the speculative possibility of lose or draw as well as win should reduce the hectic fever plaguing the currency markets for the past several months.

The real threat to the float will be the temptation of foreign central banks and finance ministries to manipulate the float itself to gain trade advantages for their countries. The paddle for that gambit most likely would be tariff and quota walls to offset the effect of rate changes on trade. Eventually this could lead into a worldwide trade war in which everyone would be a loser.

Scary as it is for bankers and businessmen everywhere to make future commitments payable in francs, pounds, dollars, lira, yen or marks, a genuinely free float can point to a need which has long been unfulfilled.

Gold has been the traditional stabilizer in monetary and trading questions. Many economists contend the turbulence on the international exchanges never will subside until this precious metal resumes its arbiter's role.

The chance for a return to tradition is remote if for no other reason that industrial and engineering demands for the versatile metal are pricing it beyond the reach of the jeweler and the minter.

The next best substitute is an international monetary system to replace individual currencies to the exchange medium between nations.

The free float can be to economics what water is to itself in seeking its own level.

Seniority Being Questioned

Private industry for the most part distinguishes between seniority and experience when it is time to make decisions on promotion.

The distinction between them is that experience connotes ability whereas seniority is a ticking off of the calendar. They can be interchangeable or they can reveal startling various.

In government service, ability frequently is not the prime requisite, or a requisite at all, for promotion. From the teaching profession to civil service to the military, seniority counts most of all.

It isn't taking anything away from seniority to say that local, state and federal government units are not getting a fair return on the taxpayers' money by not ranking performance and ability as primary considerations in filling positions in upper echelons.

It is difficult, especially in the military, to avoid the obvious pitfall of choosing promotion candidates for personal, political or other non-military reasons. One of the advantages of the seniority system is that outside pressures generally have little influence.

Even history doesn't give a clear answer to the wisdom of choosing leaders without regard for military seniority. Gen. Washington was regarded mature at 43 when he became commander-in-chief, but what about Maj. Gen. Lafayette who served so ably under Washington at age 20?

Alexander was only 22 when he began his long march, Napoleon had conquered Europe when he was 30, fame had touched Wellington at 30, George Custer gained relecture as the boy general, Caesar was 42 at the apex of his career, and Grant was beginning his second career at 40.

All of these men made their marks, but not all were dedicated to the defense of liberty. There is much to be said for the effect of aging on military decisions.

Signals From The Past

Speaking of delayed communications, which a number of people are doing these days, someone finally has figured what those radio signals were that were received on Earth 40 years ago. They may have been an attempt by intelligent beings elsewhere to say hello, in the opinion of Ronald N. Bracewell of Stanford University.

Unexplained radio signals from outer space have been received over the years, causing repeated scientific investigations. The sources never have been found and thus remain the subject of conjecture. Among those which have been explored repeatedly were a series of signals received intermittently between 1928 and 1932 by European scientists.

Bracewell reports a scientist in Glasgow, Scotland, Duncan Lunan, has taken a new reading on those signals and pinpointed their origin as the constellation Bootes in the northern sky. Bracewell leans to the theory the signals originated in a satellite that came from outside the solar system.

If that was the case the silence since 1932 of these particular signals indicates the source gave up waiting for an answer, or took a closer look and sped for home.

EDITOR'S MAILBAG

DOESN'T SEE 'LARGE PROFIT'

Editor,

In today's paper you say that the area's roads (Berrien, Van Buren, Cass, and Allegan) will get a "bonanza" from the allocations out of the new gas tax revenues. I respectfully disagree.

Webster defines a bonanza as "an exceptionally large and rich or short" or "something that yields a large profit. You admit in your story that 25 percent of the new gas tax goes for road construction. This means that the state is taking approximately three million dollars out of our pockets in extra gas taxes and sending back about two million, two hundred and fifty thousand.

I really don't see any large profit for the citizens of these counties in that kind of operation. It would seem far wiser to keep the gas taxes at the former level and see to it that they continued to be used entirely for highway use. The counties could more efficiently raise their own road repair millage.

Sincerely,
Harvey Lord

AGREES WITH LETTER WRITER

Editor,

Thank you Mr. Payne for expressing my sentiments fully. I agree 100 per cent with what you said in your letter. I too am getting weary of hearing the plaintive bleat of the so-called educators in our area. They are the only "white collar" workers that I can recall in this vicinity that are unionized and can disrupt an organization like LMC.

I think also that rather than being underpaid college teachers they are overpaid high school teachers. (Which at present isn't a bad wage either).

Rev. Frandsen — you said you hadn't heard anyone backing the school board. Either you have your head stuck in the ground or choose not to hear at all. Now, there are two on record for you to hear, but if you just take time to listen to other than teacher's propaganda, you will find many more who support the board. Trouble is that not enough who support the board take the time to write the papers about it.

FACT-FINDER'S STATUS IS CLARIFIED

Editor,

Mediator Bob Mason gave me a copy of your newspaper's editorial entitled, "Unwarranted Strike At Lake Michigan College," and the article from the February 20, 1972 paper on "Meeting Fails to End LMC Teacher Strike."

I write to call attention to one factual misstatement in the editorial.

A sentence reads: "No one is pushing this blythe suggestion from the Lansing payroll who conducted the hearings, but the two sides remain adamant on the 5.5 per cent."

The fact finder is not a "Lansing payroll." He is J. Warren Eardley, a member of the Grand Rapids law firm of Mika, Myers, Beckett and Jones.

Output Continues At Rapid Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve interprets an overall increase in industrial production as an indication that the country's economy is continuing to advance at a rapid rate.

The February output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities made a substantial gain of eight-tenths of 1 per cent, which would be an increase of 9.8 per cent on an annual basis, the government agency said Friday.

Connally Nixon's Kennedy Stopper

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Nixon's unmistakable efforts to boost the 1976 Republican candidacy of former Treasury Secretary John Connally place him in limited company. Only a few presidents ever have tried to choose their successor nominees and just one, Theodore Roosevelt, succeeded—with his choice of William Howard Taft.

From history's evidence, the rule of thumb is that retiring "lame duck" presidents don't have the political clout to tell their party what to do. So why should Mr. Nixon imagine he can have major effect?

First, while it is early in his second term, he is behaving as if the "lame duck" idea is dead, at least in his case. He exudes a sense of total command, drawn obviously from his smashing 1972 re-election victory and the evident weakness of rival power centers. It is understandable that he and his aides may believe that this huge power advantage can endure throughout his new term.

He is trying to lord it over Congress, and most realistic appraisers think he is going to triumph, despite the loud fuss from Capitol Hill. If he can bring this off, why isn't it reasonable for him to figure he can dominate his party right through the 1976 convention?

Thus far, no real opposition focus of power within the GOP can be detected, though that notion may in time prove illusory.

Mr. Nixon is not giving us the benefit of his private thoughts on the 1976 presidential outlook, but it's fair to guess at them.

He not only likes and respects Connally, whose turn to the Republican ranks is expected momentarily, but he very likely believes that he above all prospects has the kind of status and presidential bearing which would most enhance Republican chances in 1976.

The odds-on Democratic favorite for 1976 at this time is as everybody knows, Sen. Edward Kennedy. The young man may still have certain political handicaps by that time, but he is a prodigious campaigner with more than his fair quotient of the old Kennedy Magic. And it can't be forgotten that Mr. Nixon, according to friends, has always had an almost awesome fear of the Kennedys as adversaries.

So the reasonable guessing is that he sees the commanding presence conveyed by Connally as the best answer to Kennedy. The other side of that judgment is that he does not have similar confidence in Vice President Spiro Agnew.

There is painful irony in this, if the analysis is correct. For choosing Agnew as his running mate carries the corollary judgment that he considers Agnew fit to take over in the White House should anything happen to him.

Yet the signs are plentiful that his clinging to Agnew as a second term running mate was almost purely a political judgment—that it would seem a self-criticism to jettison the man he had chosen with such laudatory fanfare in 1968.

New Fashions Coming Clean

Stylistically, the 1960's began in England, with the Liverpool sound of the Beatles and the Mod Look of Carnaby Street: funky clothes, marveled young men, and all the rest.

It is not without interest, therefore, that England seems to be leading the way in another stylistic shift, this time a counter-revolution.

A fashion reporter with the superb name of Serena Sinclair — marvelously reminiscent of Evelyn Waugh's 1920's novels — filed a special story on it recently for the Christian Science Monitor. A few choice paragraphs:

"It's going to be a demanding spring — but help is at hand. The new pulled-together look essential this season wreaks havoc among the young who have loved the fun of doing their own thing with contrasting layers. 'I can't face this spring. I only know how to dress in jeans and lots of tops,' moaned one fashion artist. But the designers are pulled together too. Many are doing their best, their least freaky collections in years. . . . If every other London girl is not wearing a real pulled-together suit and hat this spring along Knightsbridge or Bond Street, then she's not as sharp as I take her to be. Far from the killing word 'respectability,' this 1950's look now has the allure of something new. It's Susan down the street, in faded denim and suede battle dress, who's going to look passe. . . .

"This is the bluest spring in years and Englishwomen, and more particularly Englishmen, should be delighted. It's of long tradition the favorite spring color. . . . More 50's feeling in elasticized shoulder lines on countless cotton dresses and in white blouses with horizontally tucked full sleeves. They stay high, or get pushed low, Rita Hayworth-style. . . . With all these London spring clothes the most surprising item. . . . is the strong return of hats and gloves. Gloves! Most English girls own one pair of woolly mittens for cold days! Period. They'll have to come round now."

Thank you, Serena Sinclair. Why London designers, in 1960, and now in 1973, seem to be the first to sense a shift in popular mood remains something of a mystery. Perhaps the relative smallness and concentration of English society has something to do with it, so different from sprawling and heterogeneous America.

Yet even here in America there are interesting omens this spring. Two or three years ago you could not walk through Harvard Square without sneezing from pot fumes and being overwhelmed with the desire to take a cleansing shower — or bath.

'Human Values' Is Theme

Executive Seminar Scheduled April 5

"A New Approach to Management: The Relevance of Human Values in Decision Making," is the title of a seminar for Twin City executives Thursday, April 5, at Win Schuler's restaurant, Stevensville.

The seminar will be sponsored by the Industrial Management Training Program, an affiliate of the Twin Cities Area Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with Michigan State University center and Western Michigan university area office.

Mrs. Edwin E. Dwan, executive vice president of Imperial Printing company and program chairman, said the seminar will be conducted by Dr. Robert Glynn Kelly, professor and author, Indiana university.

The purpose of the seminar is to examine and challenge present methods of managing human behavior in addition to revising communication techniques used in motivating, guiding and appraising, she said. Another is to examine the difficulty that managers have in defining human values and their bearing (relevance) upon management practices.

Dr. Kelly pursues a double career, according to Mrs. Dwan. A professor of English at Indiana, he has written literary criticism, drama, a novel "A Lamert for Barney Stone," (1961), and an opera libretto, "The Darkened City," (1963).

For the last two decades he has lectured on various management topics to business and professional groups. He is a member of the faculties of the executive programs of Indiana university, Columbia university, and the Universities of Tennessee and Oklahoma, of the Graduate School of Savings and Loan Management, University of Michigan. He obtained his bachelor of arts degree from San Diego State college and his master's and doctorate from Stanford university.

Mrs. Dwan said the seminar begins with registration at 11:45 a.m. followed by luncheon. Deadline for reservations, which have been mailed to executives, is Friday, March 30. Cost of the seminar is $25.

Romeo Does It Again

Albert Romeo Sr., proprietor of the Blue Bird Tavern in Benton Township, presented $671.58 in proceeds from this year's annual benefit dance to the Berrien county March of Dimes.

Romeo has been one of the top fund raisers for the Berrien county March of Dimes for the past 20 years and this year's contribution brings his total to $8,757.55.

Taking part in the fund raising event were the following bands: Don Ellis Blue Diamonds, Carl Peek and the Echo's, Webb's, Melotone's, Pugnatives, Tall Timber Boys, and Quinn Harbin Country Blues.

Also contributing to the event were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Del Allan, Ed O'Brien, and Mrs. Georgianna Enders.

SJ Man Heads Kiddies Parade Event May 3

D. Wayne Root of South St. Joseph will serve as general chairman for this year's Blossomtime Kiddies Parade scheduled for May 3 in downtown St. Joseph.

Root has served for the past five years as chairman of the event which is held annually in St. Joseph and Benton Harbor on alternate years.

Participants in the parade may enter anything from a self-made float to a bicycle or a pet.

Entry blanks that outline parade rules and guidelines are available at all Berrien county schools and at the Blossomtime office, 311 Colfax, Benton Harbor.

Root, who serves as minister of the United Church of Christ, Sawyer, says "the Kiddies Parade gives area youngsters the opportunity to become involved in Blossomtime festivities and give the elementary and junior high marching bands an opportunity to perform before large groups."

Stevensville Pair Head Blossomtime Square Dance

Heading the Blossomtime square dance roundup this year will be Mr. and Mrs. Fred Driscoll, of Stevensville, according to James Barricklow, president of Blossomtime, Inc.

This year's event, which annually draws square dance enthusiasts from across the country as well as Canada, will be held May 5 in the Benton Harbor high school gym. Driscoll, a department manager of Sears in Benton Harbor, is a member of St. Joseph's Dancing Squares, one of seven southwestern Michigan square dance clubs.

These clubs have conducted the Blossomtime square dance roundup for the past 15 years.

Tickets are available from any of the area's square dance clubs, as well as Blossomtime headquarters, 311 Colfax avenue, Benton Harbor. Spectators are welcome to watch the dancers free of charge, Driscoll said.

In keeping with the long standing policy of using only the top callers available, Driscoll said that this year's dance will feature veteran caller Ben Baldwin, of Champaign, Ill.

"Top talent like this is one of the big reasons for the event's widespread popularity," Driscoll stated.

He said during the evening a Kalamazoo group will give a demonstration of round dancing under black lights. He noted the Blossomtime queen and her court always visit the event, and usually participate in a few dances.

Driscoll and his wife, Virginia, reside at 1585 Bonnie Bruce drive, and are the parents of five children.

U.S. Going Wrong Way --Scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. auto makers can manufacture cars to meet 1975 antipollution standards, but they aren't using the best technology to develop low-pollution exhausts, a scientific panel says.

E. L. Gintzon, chairman of a National Academy of Science panel which studied the problem of controlling harmful auto exhausts, testified before a hearing conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency.

"The nation is now headed in a direction which is wrong," Gintzon said Friday. He said a majority of the academy panel believe that "it's important for the EPA to find a way to push the industry into a superior technology."

Benton Harbor police said a body, found along the St. Joseph river, near Central docks, West Main street, Friday afternoon, has been identified as Mrs. Mildred Ellen Whitney, 58, who has been missing since Feb. 14.

Police said drowning was determined to be the cause of death.

Divers earlier searched the river, after Mrs. Whitney was reported missing by her son, Neville, of 152 Barry avenue, Fairplain. Her car was located off Empire avenue, near the river.

Mrs. Whitney was born Feb. 5, 1917, in San Francisco, Calif., the daughter of Seldon and Maude Cowan.

On June 3, 1939, in San Francisco, she was married to Neville Whitney Sr. He preceded her in death in 1970. Surviving are a son Neville Jr., of Benton Harbor; three brothers, Robert, George and Jack Cowan and three sisters, Mrs. Harold (Mary) Davis, Mrs. Arthur (Helen) Buckley and Mrs. Jack (Gina) Slavich, all of San Francisco.

Mrs. Whitney was a member of St. John's Catholic church and the Altar Society.

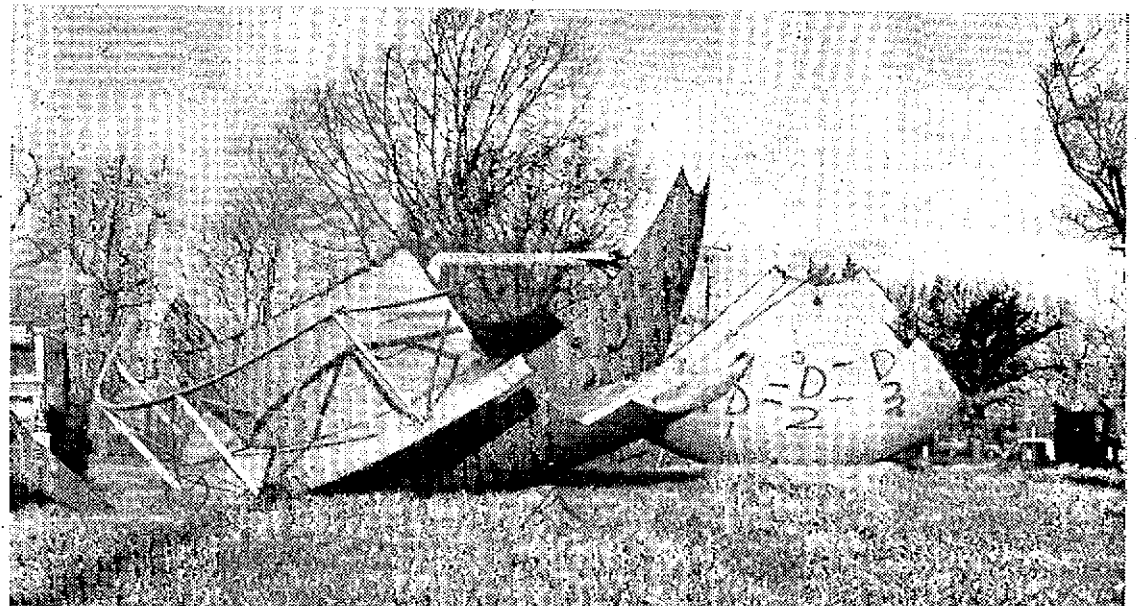

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 1 p.m. Monday in St. John's Catholic church. Father Leroy White will be the celebrant. Burial will be in Crystal Springs cemetery.

Liturgical prayers will be recited at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Frost funeral home, where friends may call after 7 this evening.

Memorials may be made to Lake Michigan Catholic School fund.

Negro College Fund Tops '72 Goal Here

The Twin Cities area United Negro College fund campaign has exceeded its goal, reaching an all-time high in contributions for the annual fund raising campaign.

According to 1972 Campaign Chairman Jack Martin, the local United Negro College fund totaled $14,751 toward Michigan's share of the $12.5 million national goal. The Twin Cities area UNCF campaign goal was $11,000.

The funds raised will assist the 40 UNCF-member colleges and universities in providing an opportunity for higher education to young men and women who otherwise would be unable to go to college, according to Martin.

"Contributions to the fund by business, industry or private citizens are an investment that pays direct dividends by helping enrich the whole of American society," he noted.

The UNCF is a federation of independent, fully-accredited, predominantly black colleges and universities joined to seek financial support through a nationwide annual appeal. "Through the UNCF, a tragic waste of human resources is avoided," Martin pointed out. "More and better education for all is one of the solutions to our national problems. Contributions to this fund help make such education available to thousands of qualified young people who would otherwise have to end their education at lower levels."

He said that 65 per cent of the 47,000 students at UNCF-member colleges come from families whose annual income is $5,000 or less, but 85 per cent of all black Ph.D.s in America come from those colleges which the UNCF helps support.

The local UNCF campaign committee includes David Upton, Berrien County Title and Abstract; Joe DeFrance, Internal Revenue service, Benton Harbor; Mrs. Helen Ford, Benton Harbor area schools; Charles Joseph, mayor of Benton Harbor; Walter Laetz, Auto Specialties; Mrs. Ethel Mitchell, Michele's fashions, Benton Harbor; and Pete Mitchell, City of Benton Harbor.

Others include Tat Parish,

Hospital's Future To Be Discussed

DERECK MARSHALL
Discusses alternatives

Decision Is Up To Douglas Citizens

DOUGLAS — A public meeting has been called for Tuesday night to determine the future of this community's hospital.

Dereck Marshall, hospital administrator, said persons living in the area served by the hospital are to decide whether a required $380,000 building program should be undertaken or whether some other course should be followed.

The official said alternative courses include dropping obstetric services and undertaking a partial building program or getting out of acute care hospital service altogether.

Marshall said the partial program would cost an estimated $280,000 and could be undertaken as one project or in phases. If acute care service is stopped, alternate uses for the building, he said, would be sought.

Causing the crisis, according to Marshall, are requirements for continued state licensing for operation.

The hospital, said Marshall, has been operating on a provisional (temporary) license for three years and must at least submit a plan for upgrading by March 31, to qualify for relicensing.

Marshall said the present license expires Jan. 1, 1974.

According to the administrator, the hospital governing board will meet Thursday, March 22, to assess reaction from the public meeting and make its decision on what course to follow based on the findings.

The public session is to be held in the St. Peter's school, on St. Peter's drive in Douglas, starting at 7:30 p.m.

The hospital serves persons living in the townships of Saugatuck, Ganges, Clyde and Manlius in the west central area of Allegan county.

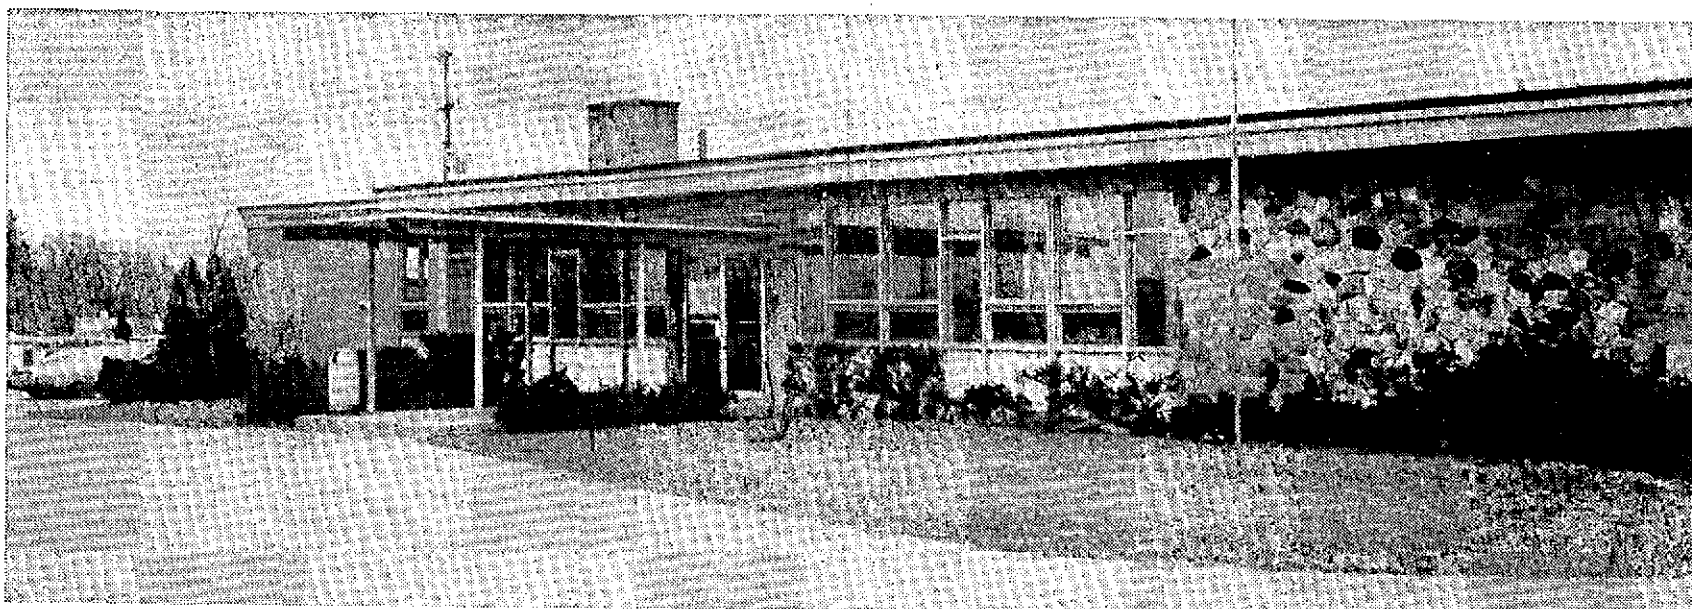

The hospital has 32 beds, including its maternity section, and has been in operation since 1936. It has been in its present one-story structure for 13 years.

Marshall said the hospital is financed through a public subscription drive conducted in the service area yearly.

According to Marshall, space needs required by the state would necessitate an addition to the building to house such as change rooms for doctors and nurses in the maternity department and surgical areas. Electrical and mechanical plant areas are also involved.

No new beds, he said, would be added through the addition. The improvement proposals have been developed through a master planning program conducted in the last four months.

Donald H. Pound of the Danielson-Schultz and company, of Lansing, master planning consultant, and Gordon Buitendort and Associates, Holland, architects, have been employed in the study, Marshall said.

DOUGLAS COMMUNITY HOSPITAL: Future of Douglas Community hospital will be discussed at a public meeting Tuesday. Plan for compliance with state licensing regulations is necessary to guarantee future

Fund Cut Called 'Ill-Advised'

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Dr. Myron Wegman, dean of the University of Michigan School of Public Health, has described the plight of 18 U.S. schools of public health as "disastrous" because of President Nixon's budget reductions.

Wegman told the U-M regents Friday the president's order to reduce support of health programs "ill advised."

Berrien Circuit Court

Judge Revises Bondsman Rules

Effective March 26, commercial bondsmen will have to post cash equal to 10 per cent of the value of bonds they write and meet other criteria in order to do business in Berrien circuit court.

It marked the first time in memory that commercial bondsmen are required to provide security for bonds in circuit court. The measure is aimed at guaranteeing the county collection of bond forfeitures, said Judge Chester J. Byrnes, presiding judge of the court.

The judge's order, filed Friday, applies only to Berrien circuit court, and only bondsmen not licensed by the Michigan insurance commissioner and does not affect persons posting bonds for themselves and those who bond without profit, such as for a friend or relative.

Berrien Fifth district court has had the 10 per cent rule since Feb. 4, 1970, according to Mrs. Mary Dent, district court administrator. Most bonds are written in district court, though some defendants post bond in circuit court after being bound over.

The new rules are not an attack on bondsmen or aimed at combatting an emergency, Judge Byrnes said.

"It came to our attention," he said, "that there wasn't any clear minimum standards for the acceptance of criminal bonds in the circuit."

To his knowledge, bonds forfeited when defendants fail to appear in circuit court are being collected but the new rules are aimed at guaranteeing that "we can collect."

It was not immediately known how many of the seven bonding firms on the county list are excluded from the rules by being licensed by the state insurance commissioner.

Judge Byrnes' rules require bondsmen to file detailed personal background records under oath and file with the county treasurer a bank certificate of deposit, payable to the treasurer, equal to 10 per cent of the bonds they write in circuit court.

It also prohibits a bondsman from delegating his "responsibilities or signature authority to any other person."

The state bonding law has no policing features, "no real standards by which one can measure the ability of a bondsman to meet his obligations if they come due" and is due for "complete legislative reform," Judge Byrnes said.

Teeth in the judge's rule come in the form of possible prosecution for perjury, the judge said, since a bondsman's statement is under oath.

Brickley Calls Death Penalty 'Step Backward'

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Saying it would be "a giant step backward," Lt. Gov. James Brickley today came out strongly against capital punishment, regardless of the crime.

Brickley, former U.S. attorney in Detroit, said, "It took our criminal justice system many years to reach its present legal and moral maturity, culminating with Supreme Court opinion which cited the death penalty as cruel and unusual punishment."

"In my view, it would be very regrettable to permit the pendulum to swing back to a period in criminal justice history which is pockmarked with crude and ineffective measures," he said.

Michigan lawmakers recently introduced several resolutions to overturn the state's 127-year ban on capital punishment. Attempts are expected to be made next week to force out of a House committee a resolution which would impose the death penalty on persons convicted of killing a policeman or fireman.

"I believe the movement results from shock, outrage and repulsion at some vicious, incomprehensible crimes, which a dazed citizenry is seeking to stop. This confusion and uncertainty, along with justified anger, has led to a degree of emotionalism," Brickley said in a luncheon address to the Michigan Jaycees.

"Our history books are replete with details of the barbarity practiced by government in the name of society. We need no new chapters," he said. "It would be a giant step backward in the legal, moral and humanitarian development of our society, as well as for effective law enforcement, if this movement to reestablish capital punishment succeeds."

Brickley said facts and statistics indicate the death penalty "is no deterrent whatsoever." He said he favors "more realistic sentencing to give the public the protection to which it is entitled."

Brickley said "abuse of parole and probation has been one of the factors which has led to demands for capital punishment. For instance, the knowledge that in one jurisdiction 63 per cent of those who were convicted of a second felony were placed on probation, leads to justified public outrage."

Van Buren Criminal Report

Most Felons Don't End Up In Cells

BY STEVE McQUOWN
Paw Paw Bureau
PAW PAW — Nearly 32 per cent of persons convicted of criminal offenses in Van Buren circuit court in 1972 went to prison while another 15 per cent were handed county jail terms, according to circuit court probation officer John O'Leary.

About 49 per cent were put on probation, including fines and costs in 18 cases, accompanied by jail time, O'Leary said in his annual report.

The remaining four per cent of the cases had these results: One person got fine and costs, three absconded and there is one case that was still pending at year's end.

He added that there were 143 felony convictions last year, compared to 131 in 1971 and 116 in 1970.

In 1971, his report noted, 61 per cent of those convicted were given prison or jail terms, and in 1970 59 per cent were sentenced to confinement.

Of the 143 felony convictions in 1972, coming as a result of a jury decision or a guilty plea, 70 persons were put on probation, 45 went to prison and another 22 received county jail terms.

O'Leary also noted that in 1972 Circuit Court Judge David Anderson Jr. issued 17 bench warrants charging convicted persons of violating terms of their probations.

In related statistics, there were an estimated 520 felony warrants authorized through the county prosecutor's office in 1972, according to County Prosecutor William Buhl.

Of those, an estimated 195 felony cases actually made it to circuit court level, Buhl said.

In some cases, Buhl said, persons accused of a felony often pleaded guilty to less serious felonies, which would partly account for the high number of felony warrants as compared to convictions, he said.

In some cases, felony warrants were issued for persons who were never apprehended, and in some other cases, persons were first accused of felonies but permitted later to plead to misdemeanor charges.

Buhl said he went to trial in about 20 cases in 1972 and obtained convictions in all but three.
